How Teeth Grow

This diagram shows approximately when each baby tooth should erupt. By the time your child is 2 or 3 years old all 20 baby teeth should be present. Don't worry if some teeth are a few months early, or late. Each child is different.

Kid's Dental Health Tip

After eating sugary or sticky foods like raisins, brush your child's teeth, rinse the mouth with water or serve juicy fruits/vegetables to clean teeth.

For more information on the health of your child's first teeth ask us, or visit the Ontario Dental Association website at www.youroralhealth.ca

Caring for Your Child's (and Grandchild's) Teeth

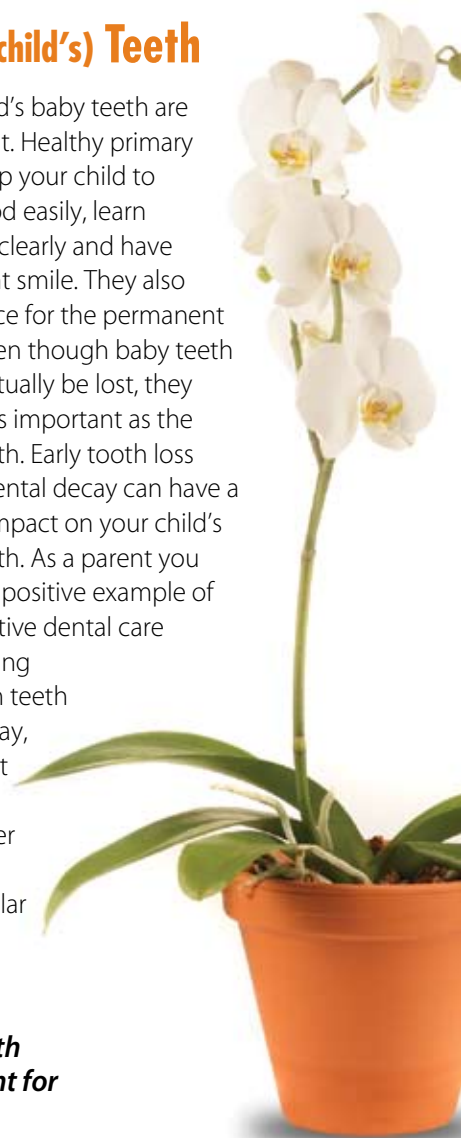

Dr. Jones' Granddaughter, McKenzie

Your child's baby teeth are important. Healthy primary teeth help your child to chew food easily, learn to speak clearly and have a pleasant smile. They also hold space for the permanent teeth. Even though baby teeth will eventually be lost, they are just as important as the adult teeth. Early tooth loss due to dental decay can have a serious impact on your child's adult teeth. As a parent you can set a positive example of preventative dental care by brushing your own teeth twice a day, flossing, eating a balanced diet and visiting the dentist regularly. Begin oral care with your child early by wiping your baby's gums with a clean damp cloth after every feeding, brushing with a soft toothbrush and water as soon as the first tooth appears and start regular dental checkups before age three.
